The objectives of this record are simple. Firstly, to dispel the myth that 'it all happens' in London in Irish traditional music terms and secondly, to record singers and musicians who might otherwise escape the attention of recording companies.

Irish music enthusiasts will often speak of the frustrations experienced when trying to find an open session in London - or Birmingham for that matter [ie. where one can participate regardless of level of experience]. Reality in the North-West of England is that one can pick and choose where to play on virtually seven nights a week from Lancaster to Crewe. A major consideration in compiling these recordings was to represent fairly the Irish music played and sung, and the wide assortment of participants. Consequently, we have championship winners, competition non-combatants, bona-fide Irish traditionalists and those whose antecedents 'never saw the skies over Ireland'! But that, thankfully, doesn't matter at all. The music in the North-West is alive and well, thank you!

Donal Maguire.
